ARE YOU A GOOD JEW?

One who has grown to be a confirmed pessimist in communal work, said to me the other day: "What would happen supposing nobody cared about how the Jewish sick, poor, friendless, orphaned and helpless got their support and maintenance?" It is a question that is in reality not a question. We cannot conceive of the possibility of such a state of affairs. It would be inhuman and therefore impossible. For Jews who are known as rachmonim bene rachmonim the thought is doubly impossible. What is possible and conceivable, however, is that instead of the Jewish poor receiving adequate and systematic support—the kind that helps them to help themselves, the kind given by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies through its different constituent societies—there would be a host of small charitable societies to support that overlap and duplicate one another, and that pauperize the Jewish poor by the inadequacy and irregularity of their donations to the needy. In this event the community would revert to the old, old method of raising funds by handkerchief collections, balls, bazaars, endless ticket selling, etc., etc. We are fortunate in Toronto, and in other cities as well, to have gotten away, at least partially if not wholly, from this nauseating, un-Jewish method of collecting the funds to support our Jewish poor. In Toronto we have a Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. The Federation idea is no longer an experiment. Wherever it has been operating it has come to stay even as it has in Toronto. The Federation has only one fault- and that fault is not of its own making- namely, it has not enough money. The Toronto Federation is in that respect the most faulty. For a city the size of Toronto that boasts 40,000 Jews, the small sum of $45,000 collected from subscriptions for the Federation is ridiculously small. This is most apparent when Toronto is compared to other cities. Montreal, with a Jewish population of 60,000, collects annually over $200,000 for its Federation. Pittsburgh, with 40,000 Jews, collects $250,000. Boston, with 77,000 Jews, collects $301,000. Cincinnati, with 20,000 Jews, collects $172,000. Baltimore, with 60,000 Jews, collects $424,000. San Francisco, with 30,000 Jews, collects $276,000. And so on. Toronto is the lowest in the scale. We will be told that the true, it would be a poor excuse when one considers the many problems of social service and charity which the Toronto Jewish community presents.

We often hear the argument that times are vey bad given as an excuse for a small subscription. There is an interesting paradox in this answer. When times are "good" then the poor do not find themselves in such distress as when times are hard and there is much unemployment. It is a fact that the demands made on the Federations in times of prosperity are not to be compared to those enlarged demands made in times such as we are passing through to-day. It is just in times such as these that the people upon whom God's favour has smiled should make an additional sacrifice to support with increased subscriptions their needy brethren.

Toronto is a comparatively young community, yet in the last few years, in spite of hard times, our people have responded generously to the many appeals that have been made on them. But there is one thing that they must bear in mind. They have not responded adequately to the needs of the Jewish poor as represented by the Federation. Eleven hundred subscribers are all the Federation has on its lists. This simply means that there are hundreds of Jews in our city who "get away with murder," to use a slang phrase. We are unwilling to believe that they belong to the "I don't care" and indifferent group. We rather think that they have in the hubbub of the daily grind forgotten that they have a duty to perform, namely, to contribute to the maintenance of the Federation.

The Jews always boast and in most instances it is true—that they support their own poor. In Toronto this boast is not wholly true because the Federation never has enough money to support the Jewish poor as the dictates of conscience and rachmonuth demand. According to the Talmud, Jews are commanded to give each poor person in accordance with his need and his accustomed standard of living.

It is well, too, that we bear in mind that the Jewish conception of zedakah is different. The full meaning of the Hebrew word zedakah is not expressed in the words of charity or philanthropy, but in the word righteousness. A Jew does not give charity. He practices righteousness. It implies that the donor is not doing the recipient a favour, because zedakah as a Jewish duty is not a voluntary act depending on the kindness of one's heart. It is not a deed which one may to our sages, even those that receive zedakah must give zedakah.

We heard a business man, who is a liberal giver himself, say the other day he has never heard of a man getting poor or failing in business because he gave too much charity. Rather have we heard business men lament the fact that they are sorry they did not give more to charity for they would then have had less to lose when the slump came. There is only one reason that we know of, why people do not give enough charity. By that we mean "ish kematnas yodo," "each man according to his means," and that reason is expressed in the Yiddish words, "dos hartz lost nisht" (hard heartedness). It is a natural human instinct to want, and to like to hold on to what one has. But, like many other instincts that we are born with, it has to be overcome, mastered and educated. This instinct to hold on to what one has, unless curbed and checked, would make miserable misers and hoarders of us all. It would deprive us of that pleasure to which no other pleasure is comparable, once it is cultivated, the pleasure of giving. The difference between a charitable man and a "piker" is not the money, half so much as it is the lightheartedness and joy with which the former gives, and the begrudging and mean way in which the latter offers his contribution. Learning to give is a matter of education. The Toronto Jewish community may not be a rich community but if everyone gave as much as he really can, gave it cheerfully and willingly, then the $100,000 which the Federation is asking in its forthcoming campaign would be assured.

For the Federation in Toronto, this campaign which commences on Sunday, May the 26th, is a matter of life and death. It cannot go on struggling as it has in the past for lack of funds. It is a miracle how it has kept up the good work it has been doing with the uncertain and small amount it has been receiving. There is only one solution. To be or not to be. If the Federation is to be then the better-to-do Jews have to give more - those not so well-to-do, must give something all must give. If you call yourself by the name Jew, then you are responsible for the care and support of the Jewish poor. If you throw off this responsibility, then you cut yourself off from your brethren and your religion, and you become a dead limb on the tree of Jewish life. Be a live limb -be a Jew --GIVE, and when you are preparing to give don't ask your head but your heart.

Your Curtains

EVERY HOUSEWIFE who takes pride in the appearance of her window draperies, yet despairs at the difficulty of stretching them to proper size and shape after washing, will be interested in the service rendered by our curtain department. When they come in, the curtains are first carefully measured. Then they are washed with pure soap, being handled throughout this process with utmost gentleness. While still wet, the curtains are placed in pairs on a new and ingenious drying frame which stretches them perfectly even and flat at their exact original size. This frame holds all four sides whether they are straight or ornamental, so that the edges are perfectly parallel and even the corners absolutely square. Curtains cleaned and finished in this establishment are returned shaped as perfectly as when new. We know that our work will please you. Telephone us and we will send for your curtains.

It seems sometimes that the Jewish working girl is the over-anxiety of social workers who inaugurate movements to save her, hold conferences and rallies to discuss her and then surround her with more safeguards than the world usually provides pitfalls for. When it is decided that the working girl needs supervision and protection she gets supervision whether she wants it or not and is protected whether or not she wants to be. If her ideals of womanhood are seen to be sagging, the machinery is started and an attempt made to jack them up to standard. Although this machinery is necessary and worthy of support, we shouldn't wonder if some day an occasional smart Jewish working girl who feels over-protected points the long finger of scorn at the home girls in the houses from which the money comes that provides her supervision.

The average Jewish girl in the well-to-do or wealthy home is an adequate example to look at. Follow her around for one strenuous day and you will wonder what it is except her parents' money that keeps her from being called a working girl. The way her day is laid out, there is more demand upon her energy and youth than there is upon that of the young Jewish working girl who, you must remember, has agencies to protect her. The young school girl at home is already attempting to do society before her duty by her studies and trying to get the proper rest in the comparatively small period of twenty-four hours.

This "society" consists of parties made up of other young well-to-dos of both sexes, beginning late in the evening and lasting until early in the morning; relaxation is part of what remains of the post-midnight period, and school is that annoying time sandwiched in between the two. We decline to lay aside our youth definitely with the wail that the world of young folks is going to the dogs, preferring to observe merely that there is something highly distasteful in the picture of an early-teen-age girl sliding home past midnight, long after she should be asleep, and a mighty unwholesomeness about this picture that includes young boys in practical possession of automobiles long before they can earn them and before they should be entrusted with them.

It is pathetic to see the young schoolgirl bartering her youth in the mad rush to be grown up before her time, anxious to slip hastily from childhood to womanhood without the girlhood period of preparation. Instead of living quietly in obedience, good manners and decent behaviour, we find her hectic, stormy, thoughtless, running in and out between dances to look at the gown which should be a dress and to add another dab of rouge to the natural bloom which she regards as cheap compared with the artificial that costs money.

This girl is already an expensive institution to her father and it is easy to see her reaching maturity with nothing more to live for than the things she can eat, wear and buy. She will be no more useful than an object of luxury waiting to marry someone who will continue to regard her as such for life. This girl, now tired of school, will be only half-educated, above work and unfitted for a profession, without the slightest conception of home-making except as it is affected by choice of furniture and filet luncheon cloths. She will be a wifely parasite, her idea of service limited to fashionable philanthropies, and will have to take her place among the other human clothes-racks that move around the bridge tables. This is the most to be expected of the schoolgirl, considering her present setting and the excessive freedom which is quickly enslaving her.

For what safeguards has she between her and such problems as present themselves in comparison with the working girl who has experienced, thoughtful social workers constantly planning for her? The schoolgirl is protected only by a busy father and a mother, over-indulgent as most Jewish mothers are. Both of these good people constitute part of the community which gives money toward supervision and recreation for the working girl, but with regard to the problems around their own daughter they are at what may be called a pretty pass. The father, perplexed and disturbed, wants his girl to be simple, sweet and unspoiled, but finds himself overruled before the devastating opinion of the very young generation that he is too old-fashioned to count. The mother, along with other women who have the privilege of rearing daughters, is struggling in a net made of her own indulgence, inability and the restlessness of the times, afraid to let her daughter run wild and afraid to restrict her when the other daughters of the well-to-do are, for the most part, doing the same.

It is an humble suggestion we advance to these parents, the the problems of their daughters with the same earnestness that they join in movements for care of the working girl and with the same sincerity that social workers meet to discuss the problems of the working girl. In friendly session let them decide that the young Jewish schoolgirl shall be modestly dressed, allowed wholesome schoolgirl fun and taught to expect supervision and chaperonage at parties given on rare occasions instead of after regular meetings in the guise of intellectual and literary efforts. All this with a view to intelligent guidance in behaviour and character.

The maid of honour Miss Clare Echenberg, cousin of the bride, was gowned in powder blue georgette and carried pink sweet peas. BEN AMI GREETED BY CAPACITY HOUSE

The reappearance of Jacob Ben-Ami at the Standard Theatre in "The Clown" was the theatrical event of the season. Ben-Ami as the Clown once more endeared himself to local playgoers. His incomparable power to act without uttering a word is once more demonstrated. He moves you. His mask pictures such utter woe and pathos, that you even forgive him the utes past midnight is a feat that few can accomplish, and Ben-Ami is undoubtedly one of the very few. Ben-Ami was ably supported by Lucy Gorman as Counselo, Mischa German, Mr. Sculnick, Mrs. Gutentag, and the Messrs. Rosen, Friedman, Dorf and Goldberg. Ben-Ami will make his final appearance next Friday and Saturday in a Pinski play, "Yenkel the Blacksmith," one of the classics of the Yiddish stage.

GERMAN MENNONITES IN RUSSIA OFFER THEIR COLONIES FOR SALE TO "ORT"

Berlin (J.T.A.)—The German Mennonite colonies in the district of Ekaterinoslav have been offered for sale to the "Ort," the Jewish organization for the promotion of trades and agriculture among the Jewish people.

The owners of the colonies, which are named Gruenfeld and Steinfeld, are anxious to join the Mennonite colony in Canada, and would like, therefore, to dispose of their land together with their livestock to the Jewish organization. The price they desire is a very reasonable one and would be payable in yearly instalments covering a period of three or four years.

The colonies are prosperous and well-organized, and there is room in them for the settlement of 500 families.
